EMPLOYERS' LIABILITY BILL.

Effort to Have It Included in Virginia's New Constitution.

RICHMOND, Va., Sept. 17.—It is stated upon the highest authority that an effort will be made by the labor organizations of the State to have the Employers' Liability bill engrafted upon the new Constitution. masters declare that they are powerless in the matter. Some advance they were certainly entitled to, so Sir Benjamin Hingley pointed out yesterday, after the many lean years they have lately ex perienced; but the greater part of the rise from which the trade is now suf-fering has been forced upon them, in the first place, by the higher wages to which the workpeople have become entitled under the sliding scale, and secondly and principally, by the enormous advance in coal, which is crippling our industries all round. Sir Benjamin Hingley is himself a coal owner, but he does not hesitate to condemn the short-sighted rapacity of his fellow-coal owners in clapping shilling after shilling appears to the shilling appears to the shilling appears to the shilling appears the same appears of the shilling after shilling appears the same appears and the same appears the same appears to the same a clapping shilling after shilling upon the

The meeting yesterday, however, was evidently not a combative one—not in favor of heroic remedies—and after a sufficiently protracted discussion of the gen eral question, they came to the conclusion to leave the coal owners to pursue their own devices, and contented themselves with a pious expression of op'n-ion that the price of iron should be spite of the advances in coal and wages many ironmasters will be unable to maintain them, because they must get orders, even at a slight loss, to keep their works going, or incur a much heaver loss by closing their works. American competition, moreover, is a serious factor to be reckoned with, though Sir Benjamin Hingley is evidently of opinion that it is overrated; and if the im-portation of American iron, or rather mild steel, continues to increase at the rate it has recently done, it must cause in time a considerable displacement of English iron and a corresponding dimiution of our coal consumption. should soon convince coal cwners of the folly of their ways."

Removal of Bodies From a Church yard Causes Trouble. PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 17 .- The cues tion of disposing of the bodies interred in the graveyard attached to the old Fourth Reformed Church, Manayunk, is ausing considerable trouble to the officials. When the trustees sold the church property to the Polish Catholic Church the agreement called for the removal of the bodies in a reasonable time. The committee in charge of the removal has not yet held a meeting to devise plans, although offers have been made by offi-cials of two cemeteries in that locality to sell lots on very reasonable terms.

As ever 259 bodies have been interred in the church yard during its existence of seventy-odd years a number of suits at law are likely to occur in the event of there not being an amicable settle-ment made with the lot holders. Several of the church officials, however, claim that the church will remove bodies, if requested, either to lots in cemeteries or church yards now owned by the relatives, or they will prov de suitable lots in one or more of the suitable lots in one or more of the nearby cemeteries. All expense of removal will be borne by the church of-ficials, and if relatives do not wish the bodies removed they can lie there undis-
